QSL KAART OP14HC (Wereld oorlog 1)
The “Battle of the Silver helmets” took place on August 12th 1914 in and near the small town of Halen, province of Limburg. It was the last big fight between cavalary divisions in Western Europa and the only Belgian victory without allied help during the first World War against the German army. The battlefield is nowadays as quiet as it was that 12th of August before the start of the battle.

The museum, situated in the peaceful hamlet of Velpen, wants this day to be remembered. A 30 m² scale model shows the chronological order in which the battle took place. Its collection consists of many weapons, colourful uniforms, documents, diaries and pictures from both the Belgian and the Germans side. The superb specimens of “Silver helmets” are the eyecatcher of this museum.

All the information shown is also documented in English.

By order of Stalin of the Chief of the General Staff of the Red Army 1 and 2 of May 1942, the battalion was raised, and 107-OSB carried out on the Bryansk front. May 8 the battalion was deployed on the first echelon of the 61 army's forces on the Bryansk front: Leningrad, Kalinin, Gorodnichno, and the city of Bolkhov of the Oryol region.

Having been in the line, the battalion carried out combat activities, participating in 3 army operations with the aim of capturing the city of Bryansk. For the period of the battle on the Bryansk front from 8 May to 8 August 1942, the individual crews of the battalion were honored with the highest moral and military awards. All military tasks were completed by the battalion in its entirety. For courage and gallantry at the back of the Bryansk front, 137 men were awarded orders and medals of the USSR.
